

Acknowledgements

Though neglected due to error in the first printing of this work, here I would like to sincerely thank all those friends, editors, and colleagues who, through their conversations and feedback, have helped to make this book possible. Though the majority of this book presents new material, Chapter 5 significantly alters and adapts a chapter from my dissertation, published as Jesus Deus: The Early Christian Depiction of Jesus as a Mediterranean God (Minneapolis: Fortress, 2014), 37-68. Likewise, Chapter 15 of this book significantly alters and adapts my article, "Literary Eyewitnesses: The Appeal to an Eyewitness in John and Contemporaneous Literature," New Testament Studies 64:3 (2018): 343-61. Before the publication of this book, I presented many of its ideas, especially in Chapters 3-7, as a plenary lecture to the New Perspectives Group in Goshen, Indiana. My sincere thanks for the invitation and the dialogue. Finally, to all and any persons who helped along the way, and whom I may have forgotten, please receive my heartfelt thanks.
